

♠ In Vienna caricatures are circulating that depict Leopold von Daun with a night-cap. His wife is pelted with horse manure on her daily drive through the city. Next turn, Daun may move only 2 cities (3 on main roads).

♣ "Hottentots" is the only name Frederick has for the Swedes. Only a poorly equipped militia is sent to fight them. If Ehrensvärd is 5 or 6 cities distant from his supply train, he is immediately out of supply; flip him.

♥ Following a major defeat, the Runaway Army, as the Imperial Army is now called, only stops retreating on reaching the Harz. If Hildburghausen has lost a battle this turn, Prussia may move him 2 cities westwards (if possible).

♦ Frederick writes of Maria Theresa, "I have to admit that this Lady is highly admirable because of her excellent morals. Not many women are her equal in this regard, most are whores. Maria Theresa abominates all whores; she has them thrown in prison, especially if she suspects them of desiring her husband. No effect.

12

♠ Frederick orders Seydlitz to engage the enemy at last! Seydlitz replies, "After the battle, my head is at His Majesty's disposal. During the battle, however, I would like to be permitted to serve my King with good use of the same." — Seydlitz will unleash his charge at the decisive moment. Next turn, Prussia may play the 11 of spades (Seydlitz) once at double value.

♣ The British occupy Cuba, which they hope to exchange for Spanish Florida. Also, fresh troops are sent to the Electorate of Hanover. Any one Hanoverian on-map general receives 1 new troop for free (if possible).

♥ Of his brother Henry (Heinrich), Frederick states, "He is the only one of us who has not made a single mistake so far." Next turn, Prinz Heinrich protects objectives up to 4 cities distant.

♦ Frederick: "One could assume that the Caucasus or the Cordillera is the homeland of the Austrian generals. Whenever they see a mountain, they climb it. They appear to be blindly in love with the rocks and the ravines." No effect.

11

♠ Prussia is recruiting new troops. "But they are so lousy", Frederick scoffs, "that they can be shown to the enemy only from a distance." Next turn, every Prussian general who receives new troops may not move into attack position.

♣ After one of his generals loses a battle Frederick writes, "It was my belief that this thing was destined to fail. It is not your fault that the cowards ran away so promptly." Any one Prussian general with 2 or more troops loses one troop immediately.

♥ Keith is deeply worried about the exposed position of the Prussian camp. "If the Austrians leave us alone here, they deserve to be hanged!" Frederick retorts, "They are more afraid of us than of the gallows." A fatal mistake; the Austrians attack that same night. If Friedrich is attacked next turn, the first TC played by Prussia is worth nothing (0 points).

♦ By unifying the collections of Cotton, Harley and Sloane, the British Museum in London is founded. No effect.

10